ORANGE

This tangerine terrace in Florida holds its own against the bright blue sea below. Balconies and outdoor rooms are prime spots to introduce vivid, fun colors such as orange, which pairs as well with nature's big, bold hues (green landscapes, azure oceans, and sunset reds) as it does with more neutral, natural shades reminiscent of the sand, stones, and marshes.

LIME

The key to making this brilliant lime guest room work, says its designer, Franco Biscardi, is the abundant natural light. "This is a modern Florida condo awash in sunlight, so it was a great opportunity to use plenty of bright, saturated color." His starting point was a pair of fabric patterns—a China Seas coil print and a smaller-scale Quadrille design—in a light green colorway. Biscardi amplified the buoyant shade by painting the walls the same hue. White lacquered furniture helps the tropical tone shed its youthful reputation and lends a sense of refinement. "We also brought in earthy elements to add warmth," says Biscardi of the abaca rug and the sandy-hued beach photography. "The setting was just right for a bright lime shade," he says. "The sunlight allowed us to have fun with it."
